Is there a limit to the potential of capitalism? Is there a cap on the American success story? If Microsoft makes a product that is only compatible with other Microsoft products then so be it. Anyone that wishes to compete against Microsoft should be able to do so without restriction. That is what free enterprise is all about. As long as the products that Microsoft creates is not a health hazard etc. they should be able to do as they please. If the public gets fed up they have the option to choose another brand. Don't get me wrong I don't like the idea of a giant corporation taking advantage of their position in the market to wield their unlimited capital and public appeal to take advantage of the consumer. However let's not put an end to freedom of enterprise and let's not put a cap on the potential of success in America.
